Gave up dieting on her 21st birthday, now weighs over 300lbs. Once a child stunt rider in Westerns before studying at NY University Film School (both the rider and NYU statements may be a big stretch—N.R.)

BIO From Find-A-Deathcom  Born in Texas originally, she moved to the UK in the 1950’s. Fran was a successful model for the UGLY Agency in London. UGLY specifically signed unusual people for their company. I was told by a representative for the company that Fran came in looking for a job as a secretary, but she honestly couldn’t fit in the office, so they suggested her for modeling. She was in a few other films aside from Rocky Horror – The Mutations (a fav of mine) and her last film was House Of The Spirits. She was a huge success in Italy as a model, and a very good friend of Federico Fellini. Fran lived in a house in Randolph Crescent, and she died of cardiac arrest and internal bleeding on May 2nd, 1997. It was in the Princess Grace hospital that she died, and she was 52 years old.

Overview Nick Stahl

Date of Birth: 5 December 1979, Harlingen, Texas, USA

Birth Name: Nicolas Kent Stahl

Height: 5' 10" (1.78 m)

Mini Biography:

Nick Stahl was born in Harlingen, Texas on December 5, 1979. After his mother, Dona, took him to see a children's play at the age of 4, Nick confidently declared that acting would be his future. Commercials and community plays followed, two television movies were also released in the early 90s. The breakthrough he needed came next when he starred alongside Mel Gibson, who hand-selected Nick for the role, in The Man Without a Face (1993). Nick played Chuck, the little boy who befriends a stranger that was disfigured in an accident. Unfortunately, his follow up films weren't much success and he slowly disappeared from the acting scene. All that changed in 1998 when he starred in two major films, Disturbing Behavior (1998) and The Thin Red Line (1998). Both films had a modest success at the box-office.

Personal Quotes

I try to avoid the sweet-ass roles.
If I had some fake tanner, I'd like to play 'Ernesto 'Che' Guevara'. I think I kind of look like him except for my skin tone. He's one of my idols.
I was an escapist, the guy who wanted to get out of school and out of the suburbs...Acting saved me.
For Sin City (2005) the director wanted me to talk in a certain voice for this character. So I left my audition on an answering machine. It worked.
I've always chosen the movies and roles that I do solely by the content.
That's what I've always tried to do. Something like T3 was so unexpected for me, and was not something I can honestly say that I expected to be doing, given the films I'd been in before. I think that the scale of a movie and the budget a lot of times determines the quality. Sometimes you find that there is better material in small and more independent movies. There's more risk-taking. I want to keep doing that for the future and choose projects based on the content and the role, and how good those are. And I think the budget of movie to me is somewhat secondary. - On his career choices.

Overview  Lon R. Breedlove

Date of Birth: 5 November 1984, Harlingen, Texas, USA

Height: 5' 11" (1.80 m)

Mini Biography: He was born in south Texas, and moved around a lot while growing up. Lon has said that his father is mainly responsible for having planted the 'film bug' in his head, having loved films himself. After graduating from a Minnesota high school in 2003, Lon moved to Barcelona, Spain, where he said he took his love for watching films to the next level - being in love with making films. It was in Spain, where he got his very first chance to work on a professional film production - Rottweiler (2004). It was also in Spain where he wrote his first feature-length screenplay, that he intended to film for an entry to the Sundance Film Festival. The film, 'Thicker than Water' was ultimately shelved for reasons unmentioned by the filmmakers.

Today, Lon lives with his best friends and fellow filmmakers in Austin, Tx where he decided to move after failing with TTW. He's currently working on a feature that he hopes will get him into the business.
